REFINE SOY OIL

SPOT MARKETS

The positive tone of soy oil futures on CBOT on support of some likely rain might stall harvesting at few locations with high crude oil futures on NYMEX boosted biodiesel demand up supporting soy oil futures. Some supporting news like mandatory use of biodiesel additionally supporting futures market. Some convergent pressure mount from high crude palm oil futures on BMD pushing market to higher side. The jump in CIF price also supportive to soy oil price. Under the cumulative development in overseas market domestic market provided room to price rise, however in addition to above factors additive push up provided from demand side and ended with price rise. The closure of Mandi stopped the progress of soybean seed influx in market having solid effect and respite market to down trends in prices. Some improvement in demand in Kota pushed market to rise, while with no change in demand situation at few locations kept prices at range bound position. The CIF rate for refined soy oil for September-January shipment jumped to new level at $617 on Friday. The underlying development in overseas along with arrival pressure will guide market in near terms.

FUTURES MARKETS:

Increased buying support lifted Soy oil sentiments at the futures market at some higher levels initially following a higher opening. However, increased profit booking activities at the higher levels pressurized the futures and traded somewhat down thereafter. The meager arrival at spots is also underpinning the tone.
