MARKETS

The spot prices of sugar remained unmoved at the major markets on poor demand and supply situations. The markets witnessed lack-lustre trade. Low international sugar prices and bleak prospects of export from India are maintaining the sentiments low. Experts see exports or raw sugar as a way out. Domestic sugar industry, faced with problems of surplus production and falling prices, is shifting its focus to raw sugar exports as the importing countries are setting up high capacity refineries. Moreover, while international price of white sugar is on a declining trend, that of raw sugar is appreciating. Monsoon has started in the southern states, which is likely to affect exports due to hassles at ports. Govt. is considering an additional relief package for the sugar industry, which includes extension of moratorium period till March 2010 and financial assistance to sugar units that missed the current crushing season. This is likely to improve the market sentiments in the short term. No major uptrend in sugar is expected in the medium to long term owing to bumper crops from Brazil and India.
